

Things to think about:

Defoe, Journal of the Plague Year

What was it like to experience an epidemic of bubonic plague?

Is it appropriate to make moral judgments about people's responses to a spreading epidemic?

To what extent does the evidentiary value of Defoe's narrative depend on his having been an eye witness?